By L. C. DEMAREE.

One of Daytona's crowning glories is her incomparable beach. No one who ever set foot upon its smooth, packed sands; no one who ever pedaled a bicycle over its expanse; no one who ever drove a prancing pair of horses and listened to the popping of their steel shoes upon its asphaltum-like face; no one who ever steered a high-power automobile down the broad stretch of wave-washed and surf-packed sand but realized that it is a world-beater, a world-wonder. Go stand upon this wide speedway and see the happy souls fit by in joyous mood, and answer whether this is not one of the seven modern wonders.

The Placid, Peiulic Halifax River.

Where think you is water with more picturesque surroundings? Nearly a mile wide, fringed with tropical vegetation, artistic cottages with roomy verandas looking out upon her bosom, gamey food fishes in countless numbers beckoning, as it were, to those with rod and reel; her bosom flecked with duck and coot and snowy-winged sea birds, which sit about as if for the sport of bobbing upon the waves; watch that lubberly old white headed pelican pouch a fat mullet, and that fish hawk straggling upward with his floundering load he snatched from the water.

See the beautiful launches, spick and span, their hampers and lockers bulging with refreshments both solid and liquid ready for a cruise upon the beautiful surface. Take out your fiel glass and sweep the river from Ormond's bride to Ponce Park light house, then say whether the Halifax isn't a thing of beauty and a joy forever, and one of the modern wonders.

The Enchantingly Picturesque Ridge-wood.

Ridgewood avenue is upon the crest of a broad ridge, straight as the crow flies and the wide spreading branches of the heavy-trunked live oaks extend their giant arms across the magnificent vista, forming an arch, and from these extended arms great festoons of Spanish moss sway as the trade winds from the tropic seas fan them. Looking straight ahead down this white shell street one has the impression of a fairy path with ethereal draperies, but as you move along and cast an eye first to the right and then to the left you see distinguished cottage homes in the most delightful settings.

See the glistening leaf of the grand magnolia which nature has varnished as no artists' brush ever could; and the cabbage palms with their burdens of showy fruit and swaying palms; see the lovely holly with its exquisite berry; see the climbing vines run riot in the trees; see the cryptogamous forms which gain a foothold on the great oaks and stately palms, and surely you will join in the chorus and say that this is a world wonder for beauty.

Surpassing Beauty of Our Cottage Homes.

Now all of Daytona's attractions, perhaps, command more nearly universal attention and praise than do the river bottoms. The river bottoms these charming old salt fronted houses of the early days and very bright they seem architectural gems, and indeed some of these old houses are the pride of the section of the country around them, the architecture of which is as varied as the river bottom appears, and structural beauty from one another. There are no monotony rows of strikingly similar buildings but the eye as it sweeps by, is treated to a Kaleidoscopic change which keeps the mind wondering, "What next?"

It is not only the exterior of many of these homes which rivets attention, within they are models of convenience, and the finishing and furnishing give evidence of the elegance and cultivation of those who worked it all out. Indeed, it is the interior arrangement and artistic furnishings and shading, more than the exterior appearance that gives a surpassing charm to Daytona homes. This feature justly merits prominence as an other wonder.

Streets and Pavements the Most and Best.

Why the Architect of the Universe chose to give Daytona the most admirable, the most picturesque natural setting of all the cities of the South is not revealed, but that such is a fact must be apparent to the most

SEABREEZE AND DAYTONA BEACH

SEABREEZE and DAYTONA BEACH, two enterprising and progressive towns on the Halifax Peninsula, are geographically one although incorporated as separate municipalities. The towns parallel the peninsula north and south for a distance of from three and one-half to four miles, and extend east and west from the surging seas of the Atlantic Ocean to the Halifax River, the beautiful tide-water stream that sets them apart from Daytona with which they have close communion by means of three bridges, as well as a half-hour ferry service.

Seabreeze and Daytona Beach are essentially summer and winter resorts and are making hundreds of new friends every year among those who desire to escape the discomforting extremes of heat and cold, and their hotels and boarding houses are now receiving splendid patronage from the most discriminating class of tourists.

The mean average temperature 80 degrees in the summer and 70 degrees in the winter, with an occasional extra rise or drop of a few days' duration, marks this as one of the most healthful locations in any section of the country, north, east, south or west.

The ocean itself, with its marvelous beach, hard as macadam and smooth as a floor, is the greatest attraction, although earth and air and sky seem to have entered into a combination to enhance its every charm. The beach is the famous automobile race course where every world's straightaway record has been made, and all these records it continues to hold without rivalry.

The sand of this famous speedway is composed largely of the shells of the coquina clam, which are about one-half inch long and very thin. For ages Nature has been rolling them up, washing them back into the surf and pulverizing them. Examined under the microscope each particle is round, unfit for mortar, builders say, because its smoothness prevents its holding together, yet, strange to contemplate, the very moment a wave leaves the wet, apparently soft beach, these round particles settle down into a cement almost as hard as asphalt, beyond the comprehension of one who has not seen it. Repairs are unnecessary, as twice each 24 hours it is entirely rebuilt by the tides. The beach has a width of 300 to 300 feet, and can be used from two hours after until two hours before high tide, thus giving an average of seven or eight hours for automobileing some part of each day.

Seabreeze and Daytona Beach each have a permanent population of approximately 1500. Sanitary ordinances are strictly enforced, streets and sidewalks are well kept, and new streets are being opened as fast as the increasing population demands. Besides hotels and boarding houses there is ample cottage accommodation for all winter visitors.

Seabreeze contains a handsome opera house and a Congregational Church; at Daytona Beach is a M. E. Church. An excellent high school is situated near the division line between the two towns. Both towns have enterprising business establishments, as is evidenced by the advertisements on the left and right.

All the attractiveness of Seabreeze applies to Daytona Beach, the two towns being so similarly situated. The development of Daytona Beach has been fully as phenomenal as sister on the north, and each year there is a substantial growth. The great sand dunes have been leveled and handsome houses have been built for both winter and all-round occupancy. Flowering shrubs have been planted which are covered with a wealth of bloom both summer and winter.

Work of rebuilding the Clarendon hotel is now in progress. The magnificent fire-proof structure, expected to contain 250 rooms when completed will be the peer of any hotel in Florida. The site is immediately north of the clubhouse of the Florida East Coast Automobile Association.

The Ocean Pier is a great attraction to fishermen and it is lined summer and winter with enthusiastic devotees of Izaak Walton, who had nothing unusual to hand save weighing several hundred pounds.

NEW SMYRNA is situated fifteen miles south of Daytona and is an ideal spot reached from Daytona by a hard surface road winding through one of the most picturesque parts of Florida.

With its ancient ruins dating back to a time when the history of man runneth not, interlaced with wires of the modern telegraph and telephone, its miles of shell streets as hard and smooth as a floor and over-arched by hoary forest giants that grew in state-grandeur during the lapse of by-gone centuries, New Smyrna is truly a place of romance and rest.

All nature here is very inviting to the tourist and pleasure-seeker. Here too is to be found the best fishing and hunting in the State of Florida.

The people are thrifty, the business men enterprising, and all unite in extending the welcome hand of hospitality to strangers. There are five church edifices for white people and an equal number for the colored population; the town has an excellent high school, a splendid public library, and up-to-date business houses.

There are any number of pretty homes for the permanent population, which numbers close to 2,000, and some very fine winter residences. There are good hotels and boarding houses where you can find accommodations to meet your requirements.

Adjoining New Smyrna is as fine a section of vegetable land as can be found anywhere. This land has been divided into small farms which can be bought at reasonable prices. Some of the finest celery grown in the State is raised on this land. All other vegetables grow in abundance, and here, too, is the home of the famous Indian River oranges.

New Smyrna has no bonded indebtedness and the tax levy is low.

A point that no tourist should fail to visit is the ruins of the Old Spanish Mission which stand somber and alone about one and a quarter miles southwest of New Smyrna. A good road leads to the place and the trip can be easily made by an automobile. Silent, in the great pine flats by the margin of the forest, is this place of pilgrimage for the pious; this rendezvous for the picnicker. The ruins are extensive, and while there is no authentic history of their origin, it is presumed that the Mission was built by the Franciscans in the days when the once powerful Kingdom of Spain first planted its flag upon what is now American soil. It was built of coquina, the roof being of the same material, cut into thin slabs and covered with cement plaster. Extensive gardens surrounded it, which were enclosed by a stone wall, portions of which still remain. Visitors usually come in parties merry and curious but the spell of the place soon falls upon them and they separate to sit alone, silent and meditative, under the arches or beside the ancient well.

CORONADO
Is situated on the peninsula opposite New Smyrna and is connected by a good road and bridge over the deep current of Indian River. Here you can put aside your conventional garb, breathe in large and deep the salty tonic of the sea and enjoy yourself to your heart's content with rod and reel in row or sail boat or in the ocean surf a short half-mile away. The great varieties of fish inhabiting the river and lagoon pass through the channel from the sea beneath the bridge. From verandas, upper balconies and windows you behold the magnificent river, the distant lagoons and islands, the forest-covered peninsula and the vast reaches of the Atlantic Ocean.

HAWKS PARK
A pretty village located along the ridge above the Indian River two and one-half miles south of New Smyrna and connected with fine shell roads. There is the appearance of newness, comfort and seclusion about the place which stamps it as the abode of people who come here to enjoy the blessings of outdoor life away from places where crowds are apt to gather.

ORMOND is five miles north of Daytona, located on the western bank of the Halifax River. The location of the town permits of good drainage and perfect sanitation; the elevation is superb and ideal for winter homes. A wide bridge connects Ormond with Ormond Beach.

Many fine residences are maintained on either side of the river, most of them embellished with subtropical flora and shrubbery, besides thrifty orange and other citrus fruit trees.

The town is very cosmopolitan, has an excellent graded school, several churches, a fine public library, up-to-date places of business and comfortable and convenient hotels and boarding houses.

Ormond has many of the Florida attractions—fine fruit, good fishing, excellent automobilng, safe boating, salubrious climate and pleasant walks and drives.

At Ormond Beach is located the large Hotel Ormond, and its lesser sister, Bretton Inn. The former occupies a position overlooking the Halifax River, while the latter has as its outlook the magnificent beach and the broad Atlantic.

The walks in all directions are particularly attractive, and the arbors, shady and inviting spots and romantic nooks are crowded with rustic seats which are mute invitations to enter into the enjoyment thereof.

Besides the broad, smooth ocean beach there are many drives for carriage or automobile—long drives and short drives; drives through groves of golden oranges; drives through dense tropical forests to Spanish ruins; drives to the ancient Causeway built by the slaves of planters of long ago, and drives to the plantations of hospitable settlers, whose places are replete with the interest of Southern fruits and flowers.

One of these interesting plantations is Number Nine, located on the peninsula, five miles north of the Hotel Ormond. Here you see a fine orange grove, together with great varieties of other sub-tropical fruits and flowers.

Five miles further on you come to Moundgrove, one of the finest orange groves in this section of Florida. Moundgrove is on the headwaters of the Halifax River and is amid pretty surroundings. The place is reached by a good road (passing Number Nine) and is a drive all tourists may enjoy.

COTTAGES AND ROOMS TO LET

PICTURESQUE PORT ORANGE

PORT ORANGE is a pretty little village situated five miles south of Daytona on the Daytona-New Smyrna hard-surface road, the scenic highway of the East Coast. The town is located on the Halifax River, over which spans a bridge from the town to the peninsula opposite.

The town is well laid out and has many pretty homes owned and occupied by residents and winter tourists. It has several churches, one of the best graded schools in Volusia county, two general stores, a real estate agency and two or three hotels.

A large number of tourists and winter residents make Port Orange headquarters, one of the several attractions being the excellent fishing. Port Orange is in the orange belt and a number of very fine citrus groves are nearby, where oranges, tangerines and grape-fruit hang in profusion. Some of the best trucking land in the State is to be found thereabout and excellent crops are raised.

West of Port Orange a short distance are the remains of the old Dunlawton sugar mill, a spot that is visited every year by hundreds of tourists. At one time all the country west of Port Orange, surrounding the old mill, was a vast sugar-cane and indigo plantation. The mill was operated extensively in those days but has been in disuse for thirty or forty years.

A pretty automobile or carriage drive from Daytona is via the ocean beach to the approach of the Port Orange bridge, across the bridge and then passing through Port Orange to the ruins of the celebrated old sugar mill, returning to Daytona by the road on the mainland. This drive affords a very pleasing variety of scenery.

MRS. SANTA CLAUS.

By ELLA E. BARNES.
(Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.)

FOR several years the proverbial Santa Claus with white beard had visited our Christmas tree to distribute the gifts and dispense his mirthful cheer. Last year he could not come, and as the age is one of womanly achievement he asked permission to visit his wife.

Of Mrs. Santa Claus we had all heard, but none had seen her, and the announcement of her coming provoked great interest. Many were the queries regarding her appearance, but none could be answered. A knock at the door announced her arrival, and in came the kind old lady, covered with (cotton) snowflakes, rosy and animated after her long journey, but radiant with loving good cheer and affection for all. She wore a long cloak of bright red homespun (a real antique, borrowed for the occasion) and a wonderful poke bonnet, an ancient calash, trimmed with gleaming holly and adorned with flowing strings of red and green ribbon. Upon her hands were huge fur mittens, and beneath her cloak, which she threw back from her shoulders, we saw her spotless crossed kerchief and a wonderful lawn apron with green sprigged border. These she was pleased to exhibit to the ladies, for she took a womanly pride in her dress although she confessed that the styles did not change very often at the north pole, and, anyway, she was too busy to think of such things.

After a short rest, through which she rather gasped her Christmas salutations, she stood to make a short speech before beginning her gracious labor of distributing the gifts from the laden tree.

She said in part: "Ever since I married Mr. Santa Claus, over 150 years ago, I've tried to be a real helpmeet to him. But I've never gone around to entertainments before. I've done the work in the background, so to speak, as a good wife should. However, this year Santa's been dreadfully overworked. Why, just think of all

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

SOWING WILD OATS.

"Oh, after he has sowed his wild oats he will settle down."

But will he?

There is a popular impression that youth—male youth, not female—must have its flavor that it is a necessary experience in the evolution of man.

But if so why not let the girl sow her wild oats? Why not let her gain her experience in scattering evil?

"Oh, that's different!" you say.

How different?

What has the boy to gain in knowledge of evil things and practice of evil ways that a girl may not gain? And if the young man can sow with reckless hand and then miraculously settle down to an exemplary life why not a girl also?

Don't you see it is all wrong, this wild oats clinging to the wind?

Don't you see the danger of reaping the whirlwind?

He who sows wild oats must reap wild oats—not wheat. "Whatev'er a man soweth that also shall he reap."

And not only must he reap the sort of grain he sows, but more than he sows. Evil propagates evil. A grain of wheat will "stool out" in the growing, producing many stalks for the harvest, which make a tough reaping.

It is hard work, this harvesting of evil seed. The stalks are tangled and tough, and the sweat must pour from the faces of the harvesters.

Young man—

Many a man of middle age today who has fought his way out of this snarled harvest field into the open would give his right hand to blot out the scars and the memories of that reaping. He shudders when he thinks what the result of his sowing may have been to others—if not to himself.

"Whatev'er a man soweth"—if the young men only knew!

Many of the sowers struggle and go down in the intertwined mat of the harvest. You have seen them hopelessly entangled?

You will come out all right?

Let us hope you may, but you will be a weaker man than you should have been. The odds are against you. The tangle of the weeds and the tares is about your feet.

"Whatev'er"—not something else—whatev'er you sow you shall reap. And you must reap more than you sow.

That law of the moral world is just as true as the law of gravity in physics or the law of crystallization in chemistry.

"Whatev'er"—not less, but—

More!

Earthquakes.

It has been ascertained by statisticians that some 60 per cent of the earthquakes recorded all the world over have occurred during the six colder months of the year. In the Mediterranean and many other districts the proportion during the cold weather is even greater. January and February seem to be the two months especially favored in this respect.

Already Promised.

Lady Fare (to pert cabman)—You will hear something more about this. Let me take your number and your name, please. Cabby—Yer kin bev me number, an' welkin, miss, an' I 'opes as much good may it do yer, but us takin' me name—why, yer axes a bit too late. I've got a young lady o' my own wot I've promised ter give my name to—London Tit-Bits.

JUSTICE HORACE H. LURTON, NEW MEMBER OF THE SUPREME COURT.

President Taft and Justice Horace H. Lurton of Tennessee, whom he nominated to fill the vacancy in the United States supreme court caused by the death of Justice Peckham, have been personal friends for twenty years. When President Cleveland appointed Justice Lurton to the United States court of appeals Mr. Taft was an associate justice and swore Lurton in. The new justice is a native of Kentucky and served in the Confederate army during the civil war. He was a law student when the war began and quit college to enlist. He was admitted to the bar in 1867 and for many years was a member of the supreme court of Tennessee.

ATHENS, Dec. 24—The centenary celebrations were held throughout Greece today in honor of the sixty-fourth birthday anniversary of King George. The King was born Dec. 24, 1845, and is the son of the late King Christian of Denmark. In 1863 he was chosen King of the Greeks, and Greece had since been the throne of the Tudor dynasty.

King George is the author of many books. When he was a boy he studied at Daytona, Fla., and at the University of Prominent Member of British Liberal Party.

William Hayes Fisher is one of the prominent members of the Liberal party of Great Britain and is probably slated for a ministerial post in the event of Liberal success in the coming general election. He was formerly private secretary to Arthur J. Balfour.

Hasheesh.

There was a terrible secret society in the east which was organized for wholesale and systematic murder. Its members called themselves "Hasheesh"—whence, by the way, came our word "assassin"—and used to get up courage for their deeds of atrocity by doses of the drug called "hasheesh." This is obtained from Indian hemp, and it is from the seed vessels that the substance is taken which yields the poison so tame in history and romance. It is a vivid green and when taken produces the most extraordinary visions and hallucinations.

Logical.

"How bright May looks when her engagement!" Yes, indeed, it really lights up a girl's face."

The Prefect Of Police

A Story of a Stolen Necktie
In Valparaiso

By GEORGE CATHERWOOD
Copyright, 1924, by American News Association

It was on the steamer Alphonse, sailing from New York to South America, that we first became acquainted with the story of a perfect, a type of perfecto, who had just enough money and leisure in his pockets to make him a capital specimen of the species. He was a captain in his line and at the time was on his way to Brazil to buy diamonds for a New York jeweler.

He had been in Valparaiso, planned to spend the winter months in the tropics, as when the winter reached the equator, he would be in the tropics all year round. He had a good income, and the soft rays made the climate congenial, so he had no qualms about the cost of living, which we learned while he was buying Chile.

Late one afternoon we noticed him in the hotel lounge, where he was seated at a table with a bottle and a glass of red, well-stuffed apples and many parts, but with each part broken, and we decided to go to him. When we did, he was still there, but not alone. Then we found great consternation that the hotel lounge, where he had been staying, was a beautiful one, took over the big.

Alphonse and I sat down with him, such as we do, and when we do, and when we do, the two of us, with the waiter, sat down to the evening meal, the delicious meal of the day at Chiloe hotel.

"I am not wealthy," he said, "but I am not poor. I am a friend to my countrymen, and I am a friend to our old friend Gilmour, who was doing with another man what he had done with me. I am not good without him, but now he has come to a smile."

"I am not poor," he retorted, shaking hands cordially. "I am perfectly glad to find you both here."

"I am not poor," he wrote in the words of Alphonse. "I am, I think, the most successful man in the world."

"I am not poor," he said again.

A Story of a Stolen Neck-lace In Valparaiso

By GEORGE CATHERWOOD

Copyright, 1904, by American Press Association.

It was on board the steamer Atlantic, sailing from New York to South America, that we first became acquainted with Jim O'Rorke, a young fellow of twenty-five, who had just enough banter and brouge in his talk to be true to his name. However, he was an expert in his line and at the time was on his way to Brazil to buy diamonds for a New York firm.

Tom Hargraves and I had planned to spend the winter months in the tropics, so when the steamer reached Panama we said goodbye to our friend O'Rorke and went ashore, but the torrid heat of the day and the cold nights made the climate disagreeable, so we soon went on southward, and the following month we reached Chile.

Late one afternoon we arrived at Valparaiso, the capital of the country and a city of well kept streets and many parks, but with such poor hotels that we decided to go out to Vina del Mar, a noted suburb and seaside resort. Here we found good accommodations at the Hotel Pasaje, whose inviting porches gave a beautiful outlook over the bay.

Hargraves and I put on cool white suits, such as are worn in South American countries, and went down to the late evening meal, the fashionable one of the day at Chilean hotels.

As a waiter bowed us to a table we unexpectedly came on our old friend O'Rorke, who was dining with another American. When he caught sight of us his good natured Irish face broadened into a smile.

"Hello, fellows!" he cried, shaking hands cordially. "I'm certainly glad to find you here."

"I thought you were in the wilds of Brazil," I said, laughing.

"I was for awhile," he answered, "but I'm going home now. I came over to Valparaiso to see my friend here, the consul." And, turning to his companion at the table, who had risen, he introduced us.

"Mr. Cuthbert, two friends of mine from the States—Mr. Hargraves and Mr. Moore."

The consul greeted us heartily, and the waiter arranged places for us at the same table.

During the meal O'Rorke told us of his travels in Brazil, and Hargraves and I recounted our adventures in Panama. The consul also proved very entertaining and was in the midst of describing a trip down the coast when a messenger appeared and handed him a note.

"I have little time of my own," said the consul, rising, and, excusing himself, he left the room.

Through a nearby window the evening air came in with delightful coolness after the heat of the day, and in the gay surroundings the meal passed happily. Here and there in the room was a tourist from the States, but the majority of the tables were surrounded by wealthy natives, and the chatter of the Spanish language sounded incessantly.

Many of the women wore jewels, and as we passed out our attention was attracted especially to a corner table near the door, where a man in uniform sat with one of the most beautiful Spanish women I had ever seen. I think her beauty first attracted me, though all noted the elegant necklace that encircled her throat and the large diamond that formed its central ornament. In a moment we had passed on, and a screen separated us from the couple at the table.

"Did you see that woman?" exclaimed Hargraves.

"Yes," I replied, "and her diamond necklace."

"I got only a glimpse of it," said O'Rorke, "but it was a beauty."

We stopped in the doorway, and as a waiter approached O'Rorke motioned toward the screen and asked, "Who is the lady at the first table?"

The servant replied in broken English. "Senora Garcia, the owner of the Pasaje."

"And the gentleman?" O'Rorke pursued.

The waiter looked surprised at the question. "The prefect of police," he said in an awed whisper.

Our conversation must have reached the ears of the couple in question, for at that instant the uniformed prefect appeared around the edge of the screen, and, bowing in sarcasm to O'Rorke, he asked haughtily, "Can I be of service to the señor?" The tone was insulting, and for a moment we stood speechless.

O'Rorke, however, was equal to the occasion, and, imitating the bow of the prefect, he returned with equal flavor, "Not that I know of."

The officer glared at us for an instant, then turned on his heel and disappeared behind the screen. We stared at each other nonplussed. Finally Jim burst out laughing, and we continued our way to the porch.

Soon the stars shone in clusters in the clear sky, such as only tropical climates permit, and gay throngs filled the porches and promenaded on the walks near the hotel. From somewhere came the silver notes of a man doll and the sound of distant singing. We sat on the veranda smoking until it was late. Then Jim remembered a stiletto he had bought as a souvenir and went up to his room to get it.

A few minutes later a disturbance came from within. A woman screamed, and a man's voice called out in Spanish.

Hargraves and I rushed in with the other guests that had heard the noise, and at the foot of the stairs a strange sight met our eyes. Lying prostrate on the floor was the beautiful Senora Garcia, with eyes closed and hair disheveled, while around her neck was a red band, almost bleeding, as though the necklace had been snatched off with violence. Up on the stairs the prefect grappled with O'Rorke, and as they swayed back and forth with uncertain footing the light gleamed from a stiletto in the latter's hand.

It was the prefect that had called for help, and before we could reach them to assist O'Rorke a half dozen of the hotel servants appeared, and Jim was overpowered. The prefect disengaged himself with difficulty from Jim's embrace and stood panting.

"Lock this fellow up until police come from the city," he ordered. But Hargraves and I interposed.

"What's the trouble, Jim?" I called to O'Rorke.

The prefect tried to keep him from replying, but Jim cried: "He stole the señora's necklace. It's in his pocket."

At this the prefect turned on him with a string of oaths. "Villain!" he hissed. "You took the necklace, and if it had not been for me the señora might have fared worse. Thank heaven, I arrived in time to save her from your stiletto."

The retainers wrenched the knife from O'Rorke's hand, and the crowd surged up hissing, for nothing excites the Latin mind like the sight of naked weapons. The affair was becoming desperate for O'Rorke, but luckily at this moment Mr. Cuthbert pushed through the crowd, which fell back sullenly as they recognized the consul.

"Hold on there!" he called as the waiters tried to drag Jim away. "There must be some mistake, prefect. I know Mr. O'Rorke quite well, and no doubt we can settle this affair in a moment."

The prefect interrupted angrily, but the consul turned his back on him and asked Jim to explain what had happened.

"I had gone up to my room for this stiletto, a curio which I wished to show my friends on the porch," Jim explained, "and on my return from the head of the stairs I saw the señora in the hands of a man who held her by the throat. I shouted to him to let go and was surprised to see it was the prefect, who by that time had wrenched loose her necklace and slipped it into his pocket. Then, realizing that he was caught, he rushed at me as though I was the culprit."

The prefect stamped his foot and shouted "Liar!" But the consul held the door, and Jim in proof of his honesty turned his pockets inside out. As he emptied his right hand pocket a glimmering gold chain fell from it, at the sight of which he staggered as though he had been struck. It was the diamond necklace.

An exclamation broke from the onlookers, and the prefect, catching sight of the jewel, sprang down the stairs. With a malicious shout of triumph he held it up before the view of all.

But "he who laughs last laughs best." The prefect had overreached himself, for entangled in the meshes of the chain was his police whistle engraved with his own name, "Pedro Menendes." Unknown to him, it had clung to the necklace during the scuffle when, in order to throw the blame on O'Rorke, he had transferred it to the latter's pocket.

Hargraves and I could not restrain a cheer, and some of the crowd in the hallway joined with us, though others sided with their countryman. The face of the prefect blanched, but he fell back on the dignity of his office.

"This proves nothing," he said haughtily.

"It proves the necklace was in your pocket!" Hargraves called out, and what might have been a general riot was at this moment prevented by Senora Garcia regaining consciousness.

For an instant she swept the crowd with a bewildered glance; then as her eyes fell on the prefect she realized the situation and, with a cry of anger, snatched her necklace from his hands.

"Oh, you ingrate!" she retorted.

"You pretended to love me, but it was only for my jewels. I owe my life no doubt to this young man!" And she turned to O'Rorke. "He arrested just in time to save me." There as her hands caught the police whistle she disengaged it from the chain and hurled it in the prefect's face.

"It is a lie!" he reiterated.

The crowd, however, easily swayed from one decision to another, closed in on the guilty officer and forced him up on the stairs. In that elevated position he became the target for various missiles that chanced to be handy until, drawing the dress sword that hung at his side, he brandished it in a circle at arm's length. In this manner he fought his way through the crowd and made his escape by a rear door.

Later Hargraves and I laughingly suggested that Jim might supplant the prefect in the señora's affections, but he declared he had enough of South American dealings, and we left the next morning on a Pacific steamer.

The Silent Bell.

Mr. Bluffen—What! Hasn't the landlord sent anybody here yet to fix that front door bell? I'll go right down and see him.

Mr. Bluffen—Don't bother about it, John. Wait a week or so. It's about time for the installment collector to be coming around.—Catholic Standard and Times.
